

Overtourism in Venice

It's your turn!

Tourism plays an increasingly important role in our society! Especially in cities like Venice this sector changes a lot. That is why you (inhabitants of Venice) are asked now!

In the context of my Bachelor Thesis "Overtourism in Venice. Impacts and policies" at the Universitat de les Illes Balears, I am conducting a survey on overtourism in Venice. I want to analyse how the situation for inhabitants of Venice and Venice itself has changed due to tourism. What are the advantages and disadvantages?

Participation in this survey is voluntary and anonymous and takes about 3 minutes. The results of this survey will be used for study purposes only.

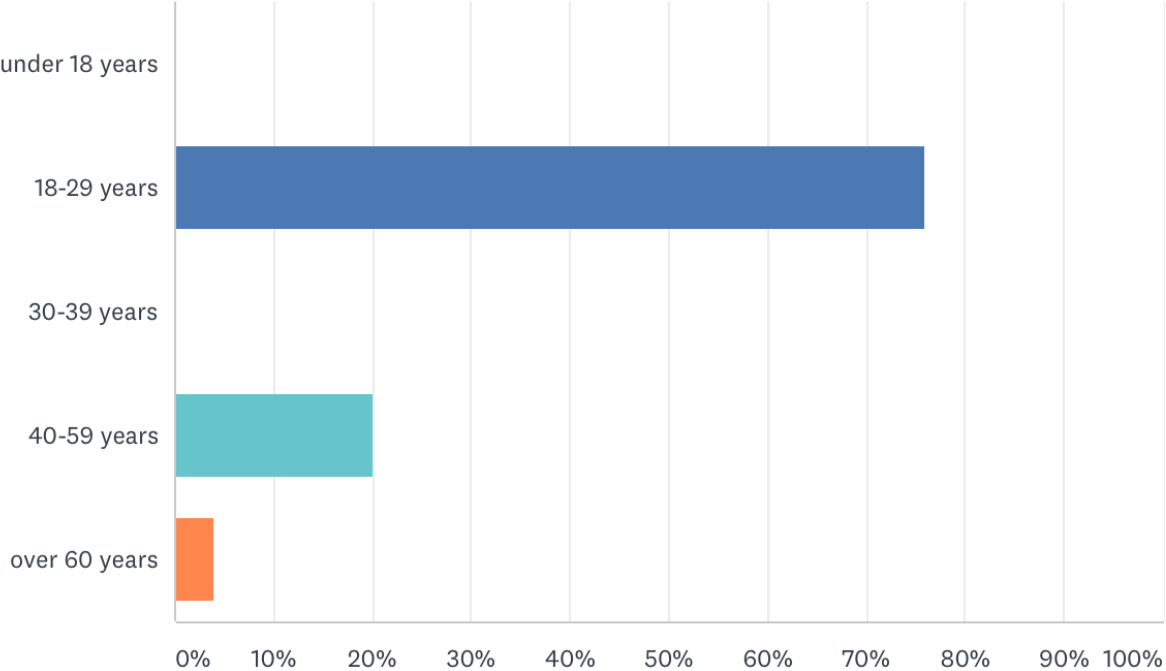

Thank you very much for your participation!

Question 10

Due to Internet travel has become way too much easy for people who are not well-mannered. Venice is different from every city in the world. Before to come, some people should be much more aware of the city in which they're willing to spend their time.

Strict regulations in order to lessen the number of airbnb apartments and hotel (whose offer does not reflect the quality of the city), improve the attractions even if it comes with a rise in prices (more quality attractions means more quality tourists coming), maybe introduce a new city tax, improve the surrounding destinations to attract visitors there and take off pressure from Venice, try to set a limit for tourists per year and to make policies in order to achieve that goal (starting from calculating the carrying capacity of the city), try to make policies more sustainable from an enviromental point of view government has to set limits to tourism and protect our city and us

The shift from mass tourism to sustainable tourism. More use of more sustainable or reusable energies and packaging materials. A limit on the number of tourists paying. The change from the "everything is available and for sale" mentality to more traditional, regional offers.

As in many other tourist destinations objectively in peril (heeding the UNESCO warnings too), impose limitations in the number of tourists.
